

Livestock Water Quality Seminar

October 22, 2015 10AM to 3PM (Free admission)

Fairfield Community Center, Fairfield Washington

Livestock producer groups, affiliated agribusinesses, Washington State University Extension and University California Davis Campus have partnered to bring Dr Kenneth Tate to Eastern Washington.

Dr Tate and Dr Tip Hudson of WSU Extension will teach livestock producers science based grazing management practices. The science based practices enable grazing cattle on lands some consider too sensitive for grazing.

Dr Tate's work at UC Davis has proven Cattle grazed with current science based management practices es can do so without polluting watersheds contrary to many political views. Dr Tate's work can be viewed at: <http://rangelandwatersheds.ucdavis.edu/main/tate.htm>.

Sponsorship and funding including a free catered lunch for the seminar provided by:

195 Industries, 5-Star Watershed Stewardship Group, CHS/Primeland, Clearwater Seed, Cattle

Producers of Washington, Gingersnap Farm and Seed, Spokane County Cattlemen, Spokane Conservation District, Spokane County Farm Bureau, Stevens County Cattlemen, Triple EEE Angus, Washington State University Extension, Whitman Conservation District, Whitman County Cattlemen's Association, Whitman County Farm Bureau.
