In the past nearly 12 years that I have been County Prosecutor, I have had an opportunity to work with different officials as elections have changed those in office. But one of the offices that has not changed is the Auditor.

Tim Gray has been the County Auditor for more than 25 years. He has been in office that long because he serves the people of Stevens County very well. The departments of licensing, elections, recording, and accounting are his responsibility. He has a large staff who work hard to provide many services to the public. We all have contact with his offices and his workers as we live here. I have never heard of any complaint from anyone about how Tim treated them. He represents the very best qualities in a public official.

He is very supportive to the other departments in county government. He is always willing to stop what he is doing to take care of a problem or to try and find out the answer to a question that needs to be answered. I know many department heads and elected officials share this same experience with Tim as I do.

Tim is very knowledgeable about the law and the responsibilities of the Auditor. We often consult with him to make sure that we agree on the what is correct or what the law really requires in the situation.

Tim has a difficult job. The auditor has many responsibilities that, by law cannot be delegated to someone else or to any other department. He is trusted to prepare financial data regarding the budget. He gives monthly reports and advice to the Commissioners on the financial position of the county. He audits the grants and departments and prepares the budget and the State Audit each year. I have heard some nonsense criticism of Mr. Gray from his political opponents, and I also keep track of the State Auditor's reports on Stevens County. The audits have found some late reports and coding errors, but have also noted the auditor needed to be provided sufficient resources to comply with the regulations. The Audit report has never found a loss to the county of even a single dollar as a result of the work of Mr. Tim Gray.

I am happy to endorse him for re-election as County Auditor. He does a good job. We should elect him again.
